You spend a lot of time making your flyers and brochures look good. But can everyone actually access them?

Five Habits for Creating Accessible Documents

Vision   Hearing   Motor   Cognition

Perceivable   Operable   Understandable   Robust

Now more than ever, the need to create accessible documents is at the forefront of our minds. Twenty-six percent of adults in the United States have some type of disability that could create a barrier that affects their ability to access digital information.

This free webinar offers highly actionable advice that you can instantly incorporate into your day-to-day workflow to assure your document is readable by individuals with disabilities.

For More Information:

www.katsnet.org

Topics Covered:

- fonts,
- layout,
- images,
- styles,
- tables,
- built-in accessibility tools

Register:

Name

Email Address (required)